Tinker Has an Advocate in the Chamber

The Greater Oklahoma City Chamber has been one of Tinker Air Force Base's greatest advocates – spending millions of dollars and investing countless hours to ensure the base's success over the past 60 years.

It all began in 1941 when the Chamber and the Oklahoma Industries Authority acquired the land for the original base and gifted it to the War Department. And with the help of partners such as Oklahoma County and the City of Oklahoma City, Tinker has been able to grow and thrive – becoming a key part of the region's economy. Today, with nearly 27,000 employees, Tinker is the largest single site employer in Oklahoma.

The Chamber garners support for Tinker through a variety of activities, including the annual Navy Birthday Ball, Tinker Leadership Council, Tinker Dining Out and others. The Chamber's annual DC visit gives business and community leaders the opportunity to speak directly with Oklahoma's congressional delegation and Pentagon officials to ensure that they understand the importance of Tinker to our region.

“The Chamber dedicates a great deal of resources to advocating on behalf of Tinker,” said Carl Edwards, Price Edwards & Company. “With partners such as Oklahoma County, as well as the support of the business community, we are able to support the base in a number of ways and ensure its successes continue.”

Leadership Notes

Continuing Our Work for a Greater Oklahoma City

No matter the list ranking America's cities, you are likely to find Oklahoma City at the top. Our presence on these lists didn't happen by accident – it is only due to the work of the business community, hand-in-hand with the public sector pushing our city forward. Each and every Chamber member is a critical part of our success.

We have accomplished great things but there is still work to be done. We must continue investing to fully realize our vision and need your support to make it happen. Our priorities for 2012 include:

- Continued support for our existing companies – addressing common issues as well as one-on-one assistance for growth companies.
- Looking out for members' interests at every level of government and advocating strongly on your behalf.
- Spreading the word about Oklahoma City's growth and success, attracting new talent and employers.
- Making the most of every opportunity to grow our visitor industry, with expanded marketing efforts to attract more visitors, conventions, meetings, and events.
- Supporting the growth of future business in our joint entrepreneurship initiative with i2E.
- Maximizing the opportunities for members to promote their businesses through Chamber events, educational programs and activities.

With 2012 will come new opportunities and challenges as we work to ensure that We cannot be a success without you. We know our city succeeds when the business community succeeds. Thank you for your continued support.

Sincerely,

Tinker Has an Advocate in the Chamber

Timeline of Advocacy & Support for Tinker Air Force Base

1938:

Oklahoma City leaders begin working to attract a major military installation to Oklahoma City.

1940:

Greater Oklahoma City Chamber forms the Industries Foundation and raised $204,500 to advance aviation in the metropolitan area.

1941:

Greater Oklahoma City submits a bid to the War Department providing a 960-acre site with completed infrastructure at no cost. They then announce that an air depot will be located in Oklahoma City. The city voters approve a bond issue of $982,000 to provide funds for the depot.

1956-1959:

Greater Oklahoma City Chamber purchases an additional 12,058 acres of land around the east, south and west perimeters of Tinker to protect base flight operations. Stanley Draper Lake (immediately south of Tinker's border) is built to protect flight operations on Tinker's main operating runway.

1970:

Oklahoma County approves a bond issue of more than $10 million to acquire residential property that is in the clear zone on the main runway. (The clear zone is an area around the base that serves as a security buffer zone and also a safety zone for aircraft during landing and takeoff.)

1982:

The community assists with base protection efforts by encouraging a local church with 6,000 people to not build in the clear zone off the auxiliary runway. A different location away from the clear zone is offered to the church by the Oklahoma Industries Authority.

1993 & 1995:

Tinker Air Force Base is added to the base closure list (BRAC). The Greater Oklahoma City Chamber assists in getting the base removed from the list both times.

1999:

The Oklahoma City Air Logistics Center joins in a partnership with Lockheed Martin to manage and repair all of the aircraft engines in the U.S. Air Force. It is the first of its kind for the Air Force and is successful in reducing costs while adapting modernized commercial repair techniques. The partnership contract is valued at $10.3 billion over a 15-year period.

2002:

Oklahoma County passes a bond issue valued at up to $50 million to clear houses from encroachment to the base and to provide increased security to Tinker AFB. All 108 houses are removed, along with a portion of an automobile dealership, to allow safe flight operations on Tinker's main operating runway.

2008:

The citizens of Oklahoma County pass a $55 million bond issue to purchase the former General Motors Assembly Plant and lease it to the Air Force. The state of Oklahoma assists with $10 million toward the project.

2011:

The Department of Defense announces a restructuring of the Air Force Maintenance Command and Tinker Air Force Base is named the Air Force Sustainment Center.

Economic Efforts Benefit Greater OKC

Numerous national and international ‘Top 10’ rankings list Oklahoma City as a vibrant place to start and grow a business because of its active entrepreneurs, strong collaborations and good quality of life — all factors that encourage robust economic development.

In 2011, the Chamber’s economic development efforts led to the creation of nearly 4,500 new jobs. These jobs were created through five new-to-market projects, one inner-regional retention and more than 100 local business expansions. The Chamber also assisted nearly 10 companies looking to benefit from the City of Oklahoma City’s Strategic Investment Program.

As the main economic development organization in the region, the Greater Oklahoma City Chamber’s economic development work revolves around the best ways to grow and attract jobs, investment, quality-of-life amenities and wealth to the region through four primary functions: business retention and expansion (BRE) activities; recruitment of new companies and investment; research, demographic and economic modeling; and entrepreneurial development. The Chamber also contracts with the City to manage the application process for Oklahoma City’s Strategic Investment Program for the OKC Economic Development Trust.

Business Retention and Expansion

Through training and workforce development assistance, location and site selection assistance, financing resource referral, help with infrastructure needs, information on incentives, and entrepreneurship and small business assistance, the Chamber works with more than 300 companies annually to help them grow more profitable.

New Company Recruitment

The economic development staff works with Oklahoma City, regional partners, the Oklahoma Department of Commerce and other stakeholders to attract and recruit companies searching for a place to expand, with the goal of further diversifying Oklahoma City’s economy and increasing income levels.

Research, Demographic and Economic Modeling

As the primary source for business and economic intelligence in the region, the Chamber’s research department compiles several publications detailing demographic analyses, market and employer profiles, and economic impact data important to local businesses.

Strategic Investment Program / Emerging Technology Fund Application Management

The team manages the application process for two of the City of Oklahoma City’s incentive programs. This includes working with companies on qualifications and assisting with the draft and final applications.

Entrepreneurship Development

A joint partnership between the Chamber and i2E, a not-for-profit corporation focusing on nurturing entrepreneurship, works to foster a business climate conducive to innovation and high growth companies.

Economic Development efforts are primarily funded by a variety of sources:

- Forward Oklahoma City investors, our private economic development funding source currently in its 16th year
- Private economic development funding
- Contracts with the City of Oklahoma City and Oklahoma County
- Regional partners
- Chamber general revenue

Centek Chooses OKC for New Facility

Last month, Centek Industries announced its plans to locate a new manufacturing facility in Oklahoma City. The new facility, near the Will Rogers World Airport, will be fully operational next summer.

Founded in 2001, Centek is the United Kingdom's leading innovator in centralizer design and manufacture for the oil and gas industry. As the industry grows in North America, and the rest of the world, Centek decided to extend its operation beyond its current facility in England. When choosing a site for its new facility, Centek was looking to enter the U.S. market, increase its manufacturing capacity and support the growth of its business.

"[Oklahoma City] certainly is a central location. There's a low comparable cost of living and doing business – that's what we were reading in the magazines," said Tony Cutmore, managing director, Centek Industries. "You've got a very proactive approach to attracting and supporting new business. When we met with the Chamber, we were very impressed. It makes a lot of sense for us to work together as a team to build this company up in the U.S."

Oklahoma City was chosen based on the region's efficiencies and infrastructure of the location, along with the quality of the local area workforce and the availability of state and local business incentives. The Chamber, the City of Oklahoma City and the Oklahoma Department of Commerce have worked with the company since March of this year to evaluate location options for their manufacturing facility. The new Oklahoma City facility will be the company's only U.S. manufacturing facility, serving all of the U.S. and Mexico.

OKC Hosts Longest-Running Basketball Tournament for 76th Anniversary

College basketball returns to downtown Oklahoma City and the Chesapeake Energy Arena December 17 for the 76th Annual All-College Basketball Classic featuring The University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma State University. The Sooners will take on the University of Houston at 7:00 p.m. on ESPNU, while the Cowboys will square off with the University of New Mexico at 9:30 p.m. on ESPN2.

“The All-College Classic will once again feature a field that is worthy of the nation’s oldest basketball tournament,” said Tim Brassfield, executive director, Oklahoma City All Sports Association. “With Oklahoma and Oklahoma State bringing in programs that are definitely moving upward, to compete against two teams with tremendous basketball heritage, this year’s event should be really special.”

With both state universities competing, the All-College Basketball Classic enjoys a substantial local following each year bringing in fans from across the state. Nearly 11,000 fans filled the arena in 2010, bringing in more than 950 room nights to Oklahoma City for the two-day event and an estimated economic impact of $1.5-1.75 million. This year’s tournament is expected to produce the same or increased results.

“This is a great event each year in downtown Oklahoma City and carries a history and prestige with it,” said Mike Carrier, president of the Oklahoma City Convention & Visitors Bureau. “Many fans who attended last year will see new improvements not only to the Chesapeake Energy Arena, but the entire downtown area. We encourage our in-town attendees to come early to eat in downtown or Bricktown and our out-of-town guests to check out other destinations – such as the American Banjo Museum and the newly renovated Myriad Botanical Gardens – during their stay with us.”

The All-College Basketball Classic is the world’s oldest basketball tournament, predating the NCAA, NBA, NIT (National Invitation Tournament) and NAIA (National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics) events. The tournament has brought legendary players and coaches to Oklahoma City such as Pete Maravich, Bill Russell, Henry Iba and Wayman Tisdale.

For more information, go to www.okcallsports.org or call 405.236.5000. Tickets can be purchased online at www.ticketmaster.com or at the Chesapeake Energy Arena Box Office.

Highlights for 2011 All-College Basketball Classic

In his first year at the helm of the University of Oklahoma men’s basketball program, 2011 will mark the first All-College Basketball Classic for legendary coach Lon Kruger.

Travis Ford, head coach for the Oklahoma State University Cowboys, will try to remain perfect in his run at the All-College Basketball Classic. Ford has coached the Cowboys for the past three tournaments and has won all three.

Chamber Choice Gives Small Businesses Options

Small businesses are the backbone of both the Greater Oklahoma City Chamber and our region's economy. The expenses that come with running a small business can be difficult. For 10 years, the Chamber has partnered with BlueCross Blue Shield of Oklahoma to offer affordable group health insurance plans to its members. This program, Chamber Choice, is available to members with two to 50 employees headquartered in Oklahoma, Canadian, Cleveland, Logan, McClain or Pottawatomie county.

Since the program's inception in 2001, the program has never seen an annual overall rate increase of more than 11 percent. Plus, most Chamber Choice health plans are approved for the Oklahoma Employer/Employee Partnership for Insurance Coverage (O-EPIC) program. O-EPIC pays 60 percent of health plan premiums for eligible employees who work for qualified Oklahoma businesses with 50 employees or less. For 2012, companies utilizing Chamber Choice will see an overall increase of 8.8 percent.

"We are a small organization and Chamber Choice is a great option for a company of our size," said Gwen Lang, business finance manager, Oklahoma City Boathouse Foundation. "We shopped around for a good program and found that Chamber Choice is easy for our employees to use – plus the pricing is good when compared to other policies."

Rate information and a complete list of approved Chamber Choice producers are available online at www.okcchamber.com/chamberchoice. Contact Christine Soileau at csoileau@okcchamber.com or 297-8961 with questions.
