Oklahoma City continues to see economic success in the form of job growth and community redevelopment. In order to sustain this type of growth, it is important to focus on creating a quality workforce that is prepared to lead Oklahoma City into the next generation.

According to the Chamber’s annual Business Retention and Expansion Report published in the fall of 2014, company leaders across sectors of the economy indicated the need to develop a broader pool of local, qualified talent. This included not only a greater emphasis on science, technology, engineering and math but also more focus given to teaching manufacturing trade skills to students.

“As business and community leaders, we have a responsibility to provide support for quality education improvements in Oklahoma City and its schools,” said Drew Dugan, vice president of education and workforce development of the Chamber. “Both the individual futures of our students...

Leadership Notes

Celebrating economic success with Boeing

Sixty years ago, Boeing first opened an Oklahoma City office with only 10 employees. Today its numbers exceed 2,100 and the company is expected to add about 800 more when their current moves and expansions are complete. Its growth in Oklahoma City is a textbook example of how many of the projects and programs of the Chamber work in tandem to help companies grow.

Our efforts to grow jobs at Tinker Air Force Base is a fundamental component. When the Air Force stood up its Sustainment Center at the base just three years ago, the proximity to this important customer became extremely valuable to Boeing. Likewise, the acquisition of the BNSF rail yard providing a new home for the maintenance of the KC-46 tanker was another home run.

Lobbying efforts at the state Capitol are another element. Incentives like the Oklahoma Quality Jobs program and the Aerospace Engineer Tax Credit give the company and its employees a necessary boost when making the necessary and sometimes expensive decision to relocate jobs from another location.

Throughout all of these additions and relocations, the Chamber’s economic development staff work hand-in-hand with Boeing where needed to help identify resources and connections they needed. And our marketing and workforce teams work to help them with employee recruitment and orientation to our community.

Continuing to grow and diversify the jobs in our city is vital. Companies like Boeing are a catalyst for additional growth in our market, not to mention the important work they do to help keep our Air Force ready for every challenge. I am proud of the work we are doing to make success stories like this a reality. Know that your membership in this organization and your support for our work enable these results – and that is something we can all celebrate.

Sincerely,

Roy H. Williams, CCE
President & CEO
and the collective future of Oklahoma City depend on our ability to improve our current education systems.”

Join the Greater Oklahoma City Chamber as it leads the discussion on how to strengthen Oklahoma City’s workforce through education at its annual State of the Schools luncheon on Thursday, Aug. 20, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum, 1700 NE 63rd Street.

Attendees of the event will discover ongoing efforts to improve primary and secondary education both locally and statewide. Speakers will also discuss the state of higher education and career technology centers in Oklahoma, focusing on how those institutions are critical in the training of Oklahoma City’s future workforce.

Speakers include Secretary Joy Hoffmeister, state superintendent of education; Natalie Shirley, state secretary of education and workforce development; and Robert Neu, superintendent of the Oklahoma City Public School District. Teresa Rose, Chamber vice chair of education and workforce, will detail the Chamber’s efforts to support educational attainment and career readiness in Oklahoma City.

The Chamber is collecting school supplies at this event to benefit the Boys and Girls Clubs of Oklahoma County, and attendees are encouraged to bring donations.

Tickets are $50 for Chamber members and $75 for nonmembers.

Growth Companies Vital to OKC Economy

Oklahoma City continues to attract national attention for its low unemployment rate, business-friendly environment and strong economic climate – and the success of its homegrown companies confirms that Oklahoma City is a place where businesses can flourish. Next month, hundreds of members of the business community will gather at the annual Metro 50 Awards on Tuesday, Sept. 29, from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m., at the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum, 1700 NE 63rd Street, to celebrate the region’s fastest-growing, privately-held companies.

In total, the 50 companies that will be honored at the awards ceremony generated a combined revenue of $7.35 million and employed more than 2,100 Oklahomans. They represent many sectors of the economy and call many areas of the Central Oklahoma region home, including Oklahoma City, Edmond, Norman, Moore, Del City, Newcastle and Yukon.

“The Metro 50 Awards honor companies that are growing both rapidly and experiencing sustained success, which is a powerful combination,” said Kurt Foreman, executive vice president of economic development for the Chamber. “Combined, the companies who will receive a 2015 Metro 50 award ably represent the kind of momentum and success that exemplifies what is great about our vibrant city and region.”

Individual tickets and corporate tables for this year’s Metro 50 awards are available. Individual tickets are $100 and corporate tables seating 10 are $1,250. Register for the event by visiting www.okcchamber.com/metro50.

U.S. Chamber of Commerce to Host Health and Wellness Forum in OKC

The U. S. Chamber of Commerce is joining with the Greater Oklahoma City Chamber and the Oklahoma City-County Health Department to host a local community forum focused on how improving community health can improve the economy and educational outcomes. The forum, entitled “Better Health Through Economic Opportunity” will feature Mayor Mick Cornett and national and local experts discussing impacts of health on the economy. The event will take place from 1-5 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 10, at the Northeast Regional Health and Wellness Campus, 2600 NE 63rd St. A reception will follow.

Local business owners, public officials and community leaders will have the opportunity to hear an overview the alarming health statistics of Oklahoma City and about best practices that could be used to improve healthy living. The participants will also have the opportunity to begin developing priorities for organization seeking to implement a comprehensive culture of well-being.

“We see a bright horizon for the aircraft sustainment business because of the highly trained and motivated workforce we have in Oklahoma City,” Caret said.

“Expanding our presence and bringing AM&S headquarters here continues a trend of combining Oklahoma’s home-grown talent with the best of the enterprise to support some of our customers’ most critical missions.”

Jeb Boatman, Boeing’s Oklahoma City site director and chief counsel for Aircraft Modernization and Sustainment, praised the governor’s office, the Oklahoma Department of Commerce, the Oklahoma County commissioners, the Oklahoma City Council, the Oklahoma City Economic Development Trust, the Oklahoma County Industries Authority and the Greater Oklahoma City Chamber in the efforts to make Boeing’s groundbreaking possible.

“During each of these meetings, the message we have heard over and over and over is, ‘what else can we do to help Boeing grow?’ ” Boatman said. “We cannot tell you how much this has meant to us as a company.”

He also noted how important the state and city’s economic development incentives were to helping Boeing grow its presence in the area, including the Quality Jobs Program, the governor’s Quick Action Closing Fund, the Aerospace Engineering Tax Credit and the city’s Strategic Investment Program.

“Combined, these incentives help defray the substantial costs of moving work to Oklahoma and growing work in Oklahoma,” Boatman said.

Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin participated in the event and described its importance. “Business growth is critical for both Oklahoma and Boeing. Your decision to place key leadership positions here underscores the long-term nature of our partnership. Today’s announcement will help solidify our position as a premiere destination for the aerospace industry,” Fallin said.

Aircraft Modernization and Sustainment provides support and modernization services for U.S. and coalition lift, executive transport, airborne refueling, airborne command and control and global strike capabilities.

“Everything we do here in Oklahoma City makes the difference in whether someone comes home. It’s not our proximity to the fight that defines our contribution,” Caret said. Boeing’s Oklahoma City site “began 60 years ago with 10 people in a rented office space, and the sole mission at that time was to help assist the customer at Tinker Air Force Base. Look at us now.”

At Boeing’s recent groundbreaking ceremony in Oklahoma City, Leanne Caret, president of Global Services & Support (GS&S), announces that headquarters for GS&S’ Aircraft Modernization and Sustainment division would move to Oklahoma City in the months ahead.
Brickopolis
Under construction
Located in Bricktown west of the Chickasaw Bricktown Ballpark, Brickopolis is a three-story amusement venue that will include laser tag, an arcade, an 18-hole miniature golf course and a gift store.

Tower Theater, Northwest 23rd Street
Under construction
Local developers David Wanzer and Ben Sellers and banker Jonathan Dodson are teaming up to purchase and finish renovations of the Uptown district’s anchor property. The team recently announced the Tower Theatre will be a music venue. Second-floor office space and ground floor retail will be offered.

Via Paseo & The Pueblo
Announced
Via Paseo, at Northwest 28th Street and Walker Avenue, is a submitted plan for a two-story mixed-use project with office space for multiple tenants and a food/coffee vendor. The Pueblo will be two buildings constructed on a vacant lot at Northwest 28th Street and North Dewey Avenue. Its preliminary design includes space for retail, gallery and office. There also will be a ground-level restaurant space and patio.

Chisholm Creek
Under construction
The Chisholm Creek development on the Memorial Road corridor is a mixed-use development with office space, retail, residential, a hotel and event and music venues. A St. Anthony’s facility, Top Golf and Cabela’s are already located in the development, and an iFly indoor skydiving location has been announced.

Shadow Lake Retail Center
In operation
The Shadow Lake Retail Center is a new 13-unit retail strip center at Southwest 104th Street and South Pennsylvania Avenue.
Crosstimber Retail
Proposed
A $4.5 million building permit was issued for this new 24,000-square-foot retail development in south Oklahoma City near Southwest 104th Street and South May Avenue. This site is located near an apartment complex currently under construction behind the property.

Taft Stadium, Northwest 23rd Street and North Classen Avenue
In operation
Originally built in 1934 as a Works Progress Administration project, Taft Stadium is receiving a well-deserved facelift without losing any of its historic charm. The stadium received $9.7 million in renovations funded through the 2007 district bond issue and other Oklahoma City Public School District funds. The stadium is currently home to Oklahoma City Energy FC and also acts as the main football field for Northwest Classen and John Marshall high schools and several OKCPS middle school teams.

GE Global Oil & Gas Technology Center
Under construction
The 95,000-square-foot, $110 million oil and gas technology center is expected to open later this year and house 130 GE employees. The facility will contribute $13 million annually in economic impact to the state.

OGE Energy Corp. Headquarters
Announced
OGE Energy Corp. will consolidate many of its metro-area offices into its proposed 26-story tower in downtown Oklahoma City. The development plans also include multilevel parking and lease space for retail stores and restaurants. Along with the office tower, the developer’s plans include a 25-story residential tower. The site is located between West Sheridan and West California avenues and North Dewey and North Walker avenues.

Will Rogers World Airport
Announced
Oklahoma City’s primary commercial airport will receive a $70 million expansion, which will add six more gates over time, improve the security check-in area and add a concourse. In addition to the expansion, the airport’s new consolidated rental car facility is under construction.
The Greater Oklahoma City Chamber concluded its Total Resource Development Campaign (TRDC) on July 29, marking the close of the 22nd campaign. Campaign co-chairs John Higginbotham, Bank of Oklahoma, and Michael Laird, Crowe & Dunlevy, will announce the final results at this month’s victory celebration on Aug. 13.

During the annual fundraising campaign, teams of Chamber members volunteered their time to connect the community with the benefits of Chamber membership and provided Chamber members with sponsorship and advertising opportunities that help them reach the Chamber’s unique audience. The campaign is an integral part of the Chamber’s work as the visionary organization of Oklahoma City and the primary economic development entity of the region.

Forward Oklahoma City: Impact on OKC’s Image Development

In the early 1990s, the national perception of Oklahoma City was grim. After a decade of bank busts and professionals leaving for other markets, Chamber officials recognized that Oklahoma City’s image perception was an important component to economic development -- no business would relocate to a city where its workers refused to move. Oklahoma City leaders addressed quality-of-life improvements in the Metropolitan Area Projects (MAPS) program, a move that transformed Oklahoma City into a vibrant place to live. The Chamber capitalized on these improvements by focusing on changing the perception of Oklahoma City in each of the installments of the Forward Oklahoma City program.

In 1997, the Chamber launched a national advertising campaign in the Wall Street Journal with the theme “Oklahoma City ... A Better Living. A Better Life.” This campaign emphasized Oklahoma City’s lower cost of living and its investment in quality-of-life amenities that were then under construction, a combination that allowed residents to have a better life for less than they would spend elsewhere. The campaign targeted economic development site selectors, and its goal was to rebrand Oklahoma City as an ideal location for business and industry investment. A readership survey conducted by the Wall Street Journal rated that advertising campaign as No. 1 in recognition.

The Chamber also developed a video that targeted management-level professionals being recruited to relocate in Oklahoma City and a 432-page, four-color book that showcased Oklahoma City’s business community and its high quality of life. The book was distributed to economic development prospects.

While the Chamber was addressing Oklahoma City’s image perception on a national level, it also promoted Oklahoma City’s image development to residents of the community. The Chamber launched a “Capital of the New Century” campaign in 2001, celebrating Oklahoma City’s contributions to western heritage, technological advancement, medical research, multicultural developments and music. The New Century Trolley Tour promoted Oklahoma City’s renaissance as part of this campaign.

The Chamber has used Forward Oklahoma City funds to act as Oklahoma City’s primary storyteller, sharing the community’s successes in order to help business decision makers understand the many benefits of living and working in Greater Oklahoma City. In 2011, the Chamber launched a west-coast marketing campaign that included print advertisements, an online video channel and an online digital magazine. In a follow-up image perception survey, 88 percent of respondents that had viewed elements of the campaign wanted to learn more about Oklahoma City, and 31 percent of respondents who had seen the campaign ranked Oklahoma City higher than before seeing the campaign. As part of Forward Oklahoma City, the Chamber also aggressively pursues national media opportunities. In 2014, its media relations efforts resulted in more than 350 national media stories.
